RAIL STRIKE LOOMS AS RESULT OF REDUCTION IN WAGES; UNIONS WILL SEND OUT BALLOTS TO HALF MILLION MEN; JULY 5 DATE FOR STRIKE

Workers Declare 13.2 Pct. Cut Unfair; Strike Seems Certainty; Unions Itch Under Farming Out System And No Overtime On Less Than Ten Hours

CHICAGO, May 31—Strike clouds were accumulating rapidly on the railway horizon today. The prospect that a new crisis in railroad labor affairs would have to be met on July 1 or soon after seemed almost a certainty The 13.2 per cent reduction in the wages of maintenance of way employes which was ordered by the United States railway labor board, on Sunday becomes effective June 1. Other wage decisions which are expected to reduce the earnings of every class of railroad employes, except the train srvice men, are pending and probably will be issued and made effective July 1.

The various unions affected by these orders already have made plans for a strike vote and their leaders predict that the members will probably vote for a strike overwhelmingly.

Added to the dissatisfaction over wage reductions are the long unsettled issue of the so called "contract system" of handling railway shop work and the question of time and one half pay, for overtime.

The unions also demand of the labor board that it assume jurisdiction immediately of all cases where violation of the ukase against farming out shop work is charged and order the practice suspended pending a definite settlement. If this is not done, Jewell said, strike ballots will be sent out immediately regardless of the wage cut issue. The shopmen unquestionably would vote for a strike, it is generally believed. The board already has ruled in one instance that the "contract system" is an evasion of the provisions of the transportation act. Whether the board will feel justified in taking the action demanded by the shop crafts at this time will be determined at a meeting tomorrow morning at which Jewell will present his demands formally to the board.

Altho not so pressing an issue, the question of over time pay lurks in the immediate background. The rail unions have repeatedly expressed dissatisfaction with the ruling of the board which eliminated time and a half pay for overtime up to the tenth hour.

KEENE COMMUNITY CELEBRATES WITH FITTING PROGRAM

Only three Civil war veterans participated in the Decoration Day activities at Keene Tuesday. They are the sole survivors of the great American conflict residing in the township. James Emerson Reed carried the colors at the head of the parade, as he has done for many years. He was followed by James H. Boyd and J. J. Straits.

The Keene band and World war veterans, Sons of Veterans and school children, the Rev. F. G. Williams, the Rev. Chas. Swan, both of Keene and the Rev. S. Lee Whitman, of Roscoe made up the remaainder of the procession.

Graves of soldiers in both cemeteries were decorated with fitting ceremonies, and tribute to the memory of fallen comrades was paid at the monument erected in their honor on the school grounds. A splendid program of music and addresses was given before a packed house in the school auditorium at 3 o'clock. The principal address was delivered by the Rev. S. Lee Whitman, of Roscoe.

years gathered for the event. Following the ceremonies the Keene baseball team defeated the New Bedford nine on the Keene diamond by the score of 9 to 7.. Merton Guthrie pitched for Keene and James Cramblet for New Bedford.

The women of the Presbyterian church served refreshments in the afternoon and evening. They reported a record business.

W. J. Gamertsfelder Dies At Fostoria

According to a telegram received by the Tribune Wednesday from L. C. Gamertsfelder, of Fostoria, O., his father, W. J. Gamertsfelder, died at the son's home following a long illness from heart trouble.

Mr. Gamertsfelder was formerly a resident of Coshocton-co. He was well known in this county.

MISS LINA MADDEN DIES HERE TUESDAY

Miss Lina Madden, one of the city's widely known women, answered the final summons at noon on Memorial Day at her birthplace, the old Madden homestead, Chestnut and Seventh-sts.

She was closely identified with the city's mercantile life for years, having held positions of trust and responsibility with both the Fountain and Ransom dry goods stores until failing health compelled her to give up a long and active business life. She was especially known to her neighbors and others close to her for her beautiful character and lovable disposition.

She leaves at the home two sisters, the Misses Lillie and Sarah, a brother Charles and family of Chicago and two cousins in this city, John and Nell Davis. Mrs. Lucretia Davis Platt and Frank L. Platt of Toledo are other cousins who are in attendance at the funeral. All of the other relatives live in the west.

For more than 25 years Miss Madden was a member of Grace M. E. church and always took a deep interest in all of its activities.

The funeral services will be held at the home, 657 Chestnut-st, Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock and will be in charge of the Rev. William B. Winters of Grace church.

BISHOP ANDERSON WILL PREACH HERE

Bishop William F. Anderson, the general superintendent of the Cincinnati area of the Methodist Episcopal church, which includes the entire state of Ohio as well as a large portion of West Virginia and Kentucky, will be in Coshocton Sunday and preach at Grace M. E. church in the evening. The services will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

Bishop Anderson is recognized as one of the best administrators and eloquent speakers of the Methodist Denomination. He has been chosen several times to represent Methodism in the important religious councils of the world, and has had such government recognition as would indicate the high esteem in which he is held by the authorities. His knowledge of world conditions is exceptional, enabling him to speak with clearness and with tremendous force in regard to tendencies and possrbilities.

There is a possibility of Mrs. Anderson being with the speaker, and adding to the occasion by her presence.

There will be services every evening thruout the week, beginning Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Pickel is also a good singer.

HARDWARE STORE AT ROSCOE SOLD

The Bell-Platt hardware store in Roscoe has been sold to Floyd Johnson, of Tyrone and the new owner will take possession of the store probably by Saturday. The store was closed Wednesday on account of invoicing.

James Bell, of Los Angeles, Calif., and formerly of Coshocton, has conducted a hardware store in the Clark building in Roscoe for the past twenty-two years. For the past four years, Mr. Bell's son-in-law, Albert Platt, of Coshocton has been in charge of the store.

Ever since Mr. Bell purchased the store it has had excellent patronage. It is likely that Mr. Johnson will enjoy a good business owing to the fact he is well known in the western part of this county.

Mr. Platt, the former manager, and his wife expect to accompany his father-in-law and mother-in-law to California this fall, where they will make their home.

WOULD-BE ORATOR IS MENTALLY OFF

After an almost successful attempt to deliver the Memorial address at the Chili church Tuesday afternoon, in spite of the remonstrances of his audience, Charles U. Fett, of Fresno, was arrested and brot to Coshocton.

Upon examination by Drs. J. G. Smailes and T. W. Lear, he was declared insane and sentenced to the Massillon state hospital. He will probably be taken away Thursday.

Fett was confined to the insane asylum from November 13, 1914 to January 20, 1916. His trouble is considered hereditary by the examining physicians.

WIFE INSISTS WARD IS INNOCENT

Mrs. Beryl Curtis Ward, wife of Walter S. Ward, millionaire New York baker, insists her husband is telling the truth in the mystery of the death of Clarence Peters, former U. S. Marine, and that no woman is involved in the case. She denied rumors she contemplated bringing divorce proceedings. Mrs. Ward is shown in a striking new pose. Ward, who was Police Commissioner of New Rochelle at the time of the shooting, is shown with a group of officers of the New Rochelle police force.

NEW THEORY ADVANCED IN WARD MYSTERY IS THAT SLAYING WAS DONE IN LIBRARY OF WARD HOME

Journal Says Ward Was Enraged By Instrusion Of Peters And Companion

NEW YORK, May 31.—A complete and entirely new version of the Ward mystery, in which it is alleged that Walter H. Ward, shot and killed Clarence Peters and shot and seriously wounded another youth, in the library of his own home at New Rochelle is published in the Evening Journal here today.

The young millionair banker, according to this story, was seated at about 10:30 in the evening of May 15, talking with Peters, and his young companion, who is now in a hospital, maimed, when two other men entered the house and were passing up the pantry stairs, with the object of listening to the conversation. These men, one of whom is said to have been an intimate friend of Ward, were seen by a maid The maid, according to the Journal's story, ran form the pantry screaming and shouting "Robbers" bursting into the library to inform Ward Ward's manner of easy good humor turned to rage, The Journal continues.

"When Ward discovered the presence of a third party in his home, it is said the young millionaire's face went as white as a sheet.

"Pulling a gun from his pocket he fired a shot at Peters, killing him instantly. Two more shots were fired at Peter's companion, one grazing his scalp and the other inflicting a serious wound. Both men slumped to the floor, bleeding profusely."

Of the reasons for the call by Peters and his friend on Ward, The Journal says:

"Their purpose was, it is said, to prove to a third party, not that they were blackmailing Ward, but that an entirely different figure in the case was being blackmailed from a source least expected."

Further revelations are promised.

BRITAIN WILL RENEW AUTHORITY IN IRELAND AND REGARD TREATY BROKEN UNLESS DEVALERA SIGNS

Churchill Says, However, Coalition Will Be Countenanced If Terrorism Is Ended And Supporters Sign Anglo-Irish Pact; Situation Held Grave

LONDON, May 31—The threat of Great Britain to regard the Anglo-Irish peace treaty as having been broken and take back her old civil and military authority in Ireland was made in the house of commons today.

"Unless Eamonn DeValera signs the declaration set forth in the Irish treaty, then Great Britaain must regard the Anglo-Irish treaty as broken and Britain has the right to resume her old powers in Ireland," said Colonial Secretary Winston Churchill, in a statement to the house of commons, on the negotiations now in progress here.

Arthur Griffith, president of The Dial Earienn, and Michael Collins, minister of finance in the Irish provisional government at Dublin, both signatories of the Anglo-Irish treaty, were in the spectators gallery.

Secretary Churchill continued: "The DeValera-Collins agreement jeopardizes free elections and makes co-operation between North and South Ireland much more difficult. The British signatories are studying the proposed Irish legislation. It is probable that it may be submitted to the house of commons after the Whitsuntide recess.

"Great Britain will not deviate from the Anglo-Irish peace treaty either in letter or spirit. If DeValera or any other party to the coalition in the parliament at Dublin bring out that the Irish constitution is not meeting the terms of the Anglo-Irish peace treaty, Britain will withhold her assent to the constitution until correction is made."

Secretary Churchill exppressed faith in the Irish provisional government, saying that he did not believe the coalition agreement with DeValera was an attempt to break faith with Great Britaain.

The colonial secretary did not attempt to minimize the gravity of the situation, but declared that, if the coalition puts an end to the terrorism in Ireland, the advantages may well be set up against its disadvantages.

"Great Britaain," added Secretary Churchill, "will not object to the coalition agreement if DeValera and his supporters will sign a declaration of adherence to the Anglo-Irish peace treaty.

"The situation is now up to DeValera," Michael Collins disavowed all responsibility for the Ulster uprisings and conflicts with the Irish Republican army.

Secretary Churchill was emphatic in declaring that in the event of the establishing of a republic in Ireland Great Britain would remain in authority in Dublin. He explained that was the reason for suspending the evacuation of British troops from Dublin.

MEMORIAL PARADE IS LARGER THAN USUAL THIS YEAR

Legion Post Band Makes First Appearance With Thirty Pieces

The largest and most successful Memorial Day demonstration ever staged in Coshocton, in the opinion of Coshocton's Civil War veterans, was staged Tuesday.

The old veterans were jubilant over the showing made, and convened Tuesday evening to issue a vote of thanks to every city organization and individual that contributed in any way to the success of the day.

The day was an auspicious one for the American Legion band. Led by Harry Emerson, drum major, it made its first appearance before the Coshocton public at eight o'clock Tuesday morning. The big band, of thirty pieces, at the head of Ralph Courtright post Number 65 of the American Legion, marched to the courtsquare, where it formed the first part of the mammoth Memorial Day parade. The band was just recently organized, and is composed entirely of American Legion members.

The Salvation Army band and the Sons of Veterans' drum corps furnished marching music for other divisions of the parade. An exceptionally large number of public and parochial school children were in the parade Tuesday. Superintendent O. B. Clifton led the children from the public schools and Father Slattery led the parochial school children.

The Spanish-American war veterans, the Moose Drill team, the Boy Scouts, the Women's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans were the organizations that marched in the parade, in addition to many civilians.

The procession formed at the court square and marched to Oak Ridge cemetery where the first services were held. Grand Marshall W. H. King led the parade from the courtsquare to the Oak Ridge cemetery and his assistant, Albert Abel, of the American Legion led from Oak Ridge to South Lawn cemetery.

Under command of Thomas Carton,

FOR A CONSTIPATED CHILD

A small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will bring quick relief.

MOTHER, when one of the children is constipated are you going to give the first laxative within reach? It is dangerous to do so. Some have been known to rupture the intestines of little children. Don't be beguiled by the outside sugary appearance. Look into the formula. Calomel is seldom necessary; salts, minerals, coal tar, never!

Unlike these, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is admirable for children, as it is for grown people, too. Mothers have been giving it to children for 30 years. They know it does not gripe, and is free from narcotics. The formula is on every package, and you can see it is vegetable, just a combination of Egyptian Senna and other laxative herbs with pepsin Use it yourself and you will find it is not necessary to take it every day, nor to increase the dose, and that it is pleasant to the taste. Bottles can be had at all drug stores, and the cost is only about a cent a dose. Have no hesitancy giving it to a baby in arms. It is absolutely safe.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

WOOSTER, O., May 31—Estella G. Taylor and Ralph Hackett, Orrville young people, unexpectedly took a last-minute short course in the art of getting married before they faced the minister.

When they entered probate court here for a license, another couple, Mrs. Jessie Clark, of Dalton, and Whitney A. Stinson, of Cleveland, had just secured a license. Mrs. Clark and Stinson desired to be married in the court room, so L. B. Bolus, the marrying justice of peace, was summoned.

The ceremony was performed with Miss Taylor and Hackett as witnesses. Then the latter couple went to Orrville, where they were married by Rev. J. F. Schoeple.

DEFIANCE, May 31.—If Rip Van Winkle were just now concluding his 20 years slumber, he would find more striking than airplane and radio the new spirit of service in the commercial world, said Benjamin Nordholt of Toledo, president of the Toledo Rotary club, in making the principal speech at the second annual banquet of the Defiance organization. He was introduced by William Romer, also of the Toledo club. More than 100 wives and guests of the 50 club members attended the banquet.

ELYRIA, May 31—Mrs. Lucy Ormsby, 80, of Amherst, filed suit against her son, Grove Ormsby, also of Amherst, claiming that the son fraudulently secured possession of their 55 acre farm and $1,000 worth of notes. She claimed mental deficiencies, on account of her age, at any signing away of her property was made. The plaintiff is the mother of Dr. Ormsby, prominent Cleveland physician. Her ancestors were founders of Amherst.

BUCYRUS, May 31.—Local papers are carrying legal advertising for the sale of the Allen Motor Car plants at Columbus, Bucyrus and Fostoria, the sale to be held at the Columbus plant of the company, Tuesday, June 27.

GUYSVILLE, May 31.—While W. M. Bentz was making a ten mile hike to the depot here to take a train for Athens, a strange carrier pigeon flew about his head and finally alighted on his shoulder. The bird refused to leave him, even boarding the train and made the trip to and from Athens, and then accompanied him home.

ELYRIA, May 31—The relics of the Lorain County Historical Society, ousted from a cellar room in the court house, will find refuge in the attic of the city hall building until better quarters are provided by the city.

WOOSTER, May 31.—When Eva Lehman, three, was being entertained by George Springer, four, at the home of Ames Sprunger, near Dalton, George took his playmate to the barn to show her the new kittens that his "mamma cat" was carefully shielding in the haymow.

The tots climbed the ladder, but Eva was afraid to get close to the dark, deep hole, in the bottom of which nestled the furry balls with eyes yet unopened.

"I'll get a light," declared the valiant George, and he hurried to the house. He returned soon, and struck a match to illuminate the home of the kittens.

Today the barn is in ashes. George and Eva narrowly escaped from the blaze, which spread rapidly through the dry hay, and the kittens were cremated. The loss is about $7,000, it is estimated.

ELYRIA, May 31 — Leopold Hoffman, of Grafton, files suits against his daughter, Mrs. Mildred D. Corey to prevent her getting possession of the family home. Hoffman charges that while ill he proposed to will the property to the daughter and that he later found out that he signed the deed to the property. He now says he was mentally incompetent to transact business at the time the alleged transaction transpired.

NELSONVILLE, May 31.—The Nelsonville Chamber of Commerce has condemed the executive committee of the Ohio United Mine Workers for its order forbidding union miners to dig any coal for any purpose. The city water and light and ice plants here are all dependent upon such coal which has been mined by union permission since the strike started. The city is in danger of severe loss. Some of the miners are said to have protested the order. It is said that 70 per cent of the population of Nelsonville is made up of miners and their families.

HAYDENVILLE, May 31.—Hocking county school children have been making a splendid attendance record during the past year. In March and April, despite the attractions of spring, there were three schools in the county which had perfect attendance records. The average for the two months for the entire county was 88 per cent.

GLOUSTER, May 31 Game protection is attracting lots of attention in Athens county now. Game Warden Lefever, of this city, is hatching 600 pheasant eggs at his farm near here and will release the young birds on the game refuge near town. Last year he was very successful in hatching game birds for the state. The old canal reservoir at Wolf's Basin will be seined shortly so that the fish in the shallow part of the lake may be placed in deeper water. New game protectors have been named and game hogs will be on the alert hereafter.

MAINTENANCE-OF-WAY WORKERS TO FIGHT PROPOSED WAGE CUT

CHICAGO, May 31—Railroad labor was prepared today for a "fight to the finish" against wage cuts announced by the United States railroad labor board. This decision of the railroad labor board is indefensible and undoubtedly will be rejected by railroad employes when put before them for a vote according to the laws of their organizations, it was declared officially by B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employees department of the American Federation of Labor.

The decision, of the board announced here Saturday, cuts the wages of some 400,000 members of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way workers from one to five cents per hour.

COAL FAMINE IS AROUND CORNER

WASHINGTON, May 31—The nation wide mine strike now nearing the end of its second month, is running the United States squarely into a coal famine of alarming proportions, according to declarations in "Labor," a newspaper published by the sixteen standard railway labor organizations.

"With surplus coal stocks diminishing at a rate of four million tons a week and actual famine looming up a few weeks ahead, if the lockout of coal miners continues, the government remains blind to the inevitable consequences that all too soon will afflict the nation," the newspaper said. "The point that responsible government officials seem to be missing is that non-union production is being taken up as fast as it is loaded on cars. It is calculating solely on a basis of immediate, imperative needs."

Designer Says Women Should Choose Dress to Harmonize With Type

NEW YORK, May 31—"Women would be happier and more efficient if they selected their clothes with reference to colors that harmonize with their type—blonde, near-blonde or brunette." This is the theory used by Mrs. Bertha Holley, well known New York artist, in her efforts to make woman's attire a frame for her personality and individuality rather than just "clothes." She spent some time in France prior to the war, and failing to find the inspiration for designing there that she sought, came home and started to put some of her own ideas for woman's dress into effect.

Since then she has designed frocks, suits and hats for many of the noted actresses, society women and others.

"I base my scheme for woman's dress," Mrs. Holley explained, as she showed various designs, "upon type and coloring. Real blondes should always wear blue or gray or combinations of those shades, near blondes should wear neutral tones, or gray blue. Brunettes should always wear some tint of gold or brown. Auburn haired women green, gold or brown.

"I do not think of the prevailing mode in dress when I design a garment," said Mrs. Holley. "Why should I? It might not fit the woman I am dressing at all. I try to make attire simple, conform to her type, and of good material and along lines that will always be in good taste. Above all I enjoy designing for the intelligent professional or business woman."

Farmers Cut Alfalfa After New Growth Starts

When should alfalfa be cut for hay? The practice of cutting alfalfa when the new shoots or sprouts are 2 or 3 inches in length is recommended by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

Experimental evidence bears out the common experience of farmers that early cuting is injurious to the subsequent growth and stand of plants and favorable to he growth of weeds.

If the weather is unfavorable, cutting may be delayed without serious injury even tho the plants come into full bloom and the new shoots or second growth sprouts become long enough to be severly clipped. The largest yield of hay is obtained by cutting when the plants are in full bloom. Such delay, however, may result in securing only two cuttings in a season. A stubble at least two inches long hould be left and the last cutting made early enough to permit a growth ant in meadows and pastures where upper soil. Tho a weed, it will have served a good purpose, if its presence leads to the use of lime as soon as needed.

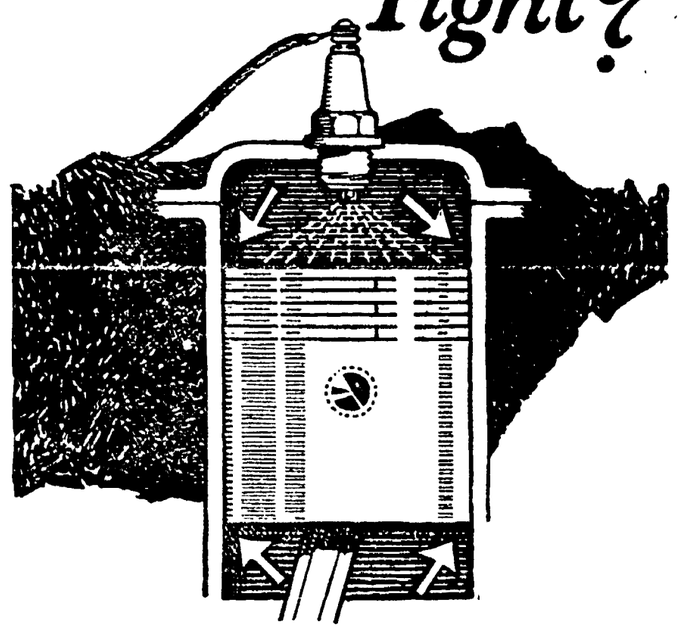

Red Sorrel In Field Suggests Acid Soil

An abundance of red topped sorrel indicates an acid condition of the soil which may be corrected by the use of lime, said Prof. A. D. Selby, botanist at the Experiment Station, on receiving specimens of this weed for identification.

The plant is conspicuous at this season because of the red color of the seed producing parts. It thrives best on acid soil and may become abundred clover and the better grasses fail red clover and the beter grasses fail because of acidity. In fact, the presence of sorrel may be taken as a fair indication of the need of lime.

Agricultural students in some of the high schools, in the western part of Ohio where the plant is making its first appearance, are studying it in connection with the loss of lime in the

Theft Shows Need Of State Police

Is the farmer entitled to any protection from the widespread depredations of thieves who roam about the country in auto-trucks? The need for protection may be noted on every hand. On a recent Sunday several young evergreen trees were pulled from a forest planting and brot into the city by members of an auto party. This was a thotless act, perhaps, but it meant a real loss to the owner. In December, 1921 choice plantings of spruce trees were cut and removed from a farm in Wayne County for the Chrismtas market. As might be expected this thieving was done at night by men who Journeyed a number of miles from a not remote city. Not content with one large truck load, they came back for a second. This proved their undoing; for by a lucky stroke the men were caught and taken into custody.

Nine times out of ten, however, the thief gets away with the farmer's apples, vegetables, Christmas trees, and even livestock.

When may the state be expected to make a serious effort to protect her citizens and their property in the country, as well as they are now protected in the cities? Ohio cities and villages are lighted and have a police patrol. May not a state constabulary or mounted police for rural service similar to that of Canada, Pennsylvania, New York and a score of other states be equally beneficial to the public welfare in Ohio?

Hypocrisy About Haiti

A flattering view of American intervention in Haiti is given in an article by H. P. Davis in the New York Tribune. According to Mr. Davis "our intervention was, at the time, thankfully accepted by a terrified and despairing people"; it was rendered necessary by the fact that European nations—specificially France—would otherwise have intervened; it was benevolent in its intentions; the elections which followed were conducted "without intimidation or military pressure."

But the facts of the occupation do not quite fit these pleasant assertions. One very real cause of our intervention was the refusal of the Haitians to agree to a treaty under which American financiers would have been placed in practical control of the country. Another was the desire of the Navy Department to complete its control of the passages leading into the Caribbean. Philip Sudre Daetiguenave, first president under American occupation, was the Navy Department's candidate, as dispatches to Admiral Caperton from Washington candidly stated. The election was controlled by the marines, and there is evidence to show that it was not secret and that the electors were terrorized.

As to the "thankful acceptance" of American rule, the occupation and its hired native policemen found it necessary to kill some two thousand "bandits" or "cacos"—every Haitian who fought for his country's independence was called by this opprobrious name—and even then, as Mr. Davis himself admits, the Haitians were not completely convinced of our benevolence.

Mr. Davis thinks "the American people have been 'fed up' on atrocity stories" about our doings in Haiti; the fact is that the Senate investigating committee collected hundreds of pages of testimony, never controverted, which indicated that our marines and some of the "cacos" we enlisted in the native constabularly created for a time in the interior districts a veritable reign of terror.

There exists at this moment an influential organization of Haitians who want complete independence, to which, of course, they are perfectly entitled. There also exists a powerful group of Americans who want to lend money and carry on trade in Haiti on their own terms and for their own profit.

The nauseating part of the whole business is the pretense that we are acting for the good of the Haitians. There has never been the slightest indication that we are doing anything of the kind. Good will result if the island is developed by American capital, but American capital is there solely for the benefit of its own pockets, just as Japanese capital is in Siberia and Corea. If we want our business men to go in on fair terms we should withdraw the military forces, which at present, altho paid out of the public purse, are in fact acting in a private interest.

Commodity Or Citizen?

THE reduction in railroad wages ordered by the United States Railroad Labor Board is viewed by many citizens as a vicarious sacrifice necessary to propitiate the gods of prosperity. They are willing to lower railroad wages below any conceivable estimate of the cost of living on the assumption that thereby business will be stimulated and the general welfare improved.

Railroad workers, in such a view, are in the plight of Jonah, who was thrown overboard in order that his fellow seafarers might be saved. Scripture does not relate the subsequent fortunes of those responsible for Jonah's adventures, and there is no way now of telling whether the adversity decreed for the railroad men will bring prosperity to other more numerous classes. What has happened to the men involved, however, is perfectly plain.

After July 1 the wages of maintenance-of-way men will range from 23 to 35 cents an hour, or from $2.30 to $3.50 a day on the days when weather permits work. If every day were fair and the supply of work unlimited this great class of laborers would earn from $13.80 to $21 a week. Some of the men paid this wage live in company houses and pay little rent. A large number live in rural districts in which the cost of living is lower than in the cities. Nevertheless, these rates imply a very low standard of living, much lower than any public authority which considered the cost of living has been willing to recommend as the minimum necessary.

Because of this disparity between the cost of living as reckoned by economists and the actual wages paid on the railroads and in other industries, an inclination is shown to regard the cost of living studies with hostility and contempt. After all, people do live on incomes far less than the wages reckoned as minima. The facts seem to contradict the theory. There is a certain contradiction. The statistician certainly is never able to foresee the ingenuity which the poor use to stretch too little into enough. Yet in another way there is no inconsistency.

The answer to the question of the minimum wage depends chiefly on the kind of civilization which is desired. Chinese and Coreans can live on less than Japanese, and for that reason the Japanese government excludes workers of these races from Nippon. Japanese workers can live on less than American laborers, and in consequence we have our exclusion laws on the Pacific coast. Americans can sustain life and reproduce their kind at different levels of existence. It is not possible, however, to develop a wholesome democracy out of people compelled to live in squalor. This is the real question which the American people and their agent, the government, must decide.

So far as wages are concerned, the Labor Board bids fair to take away all that it has given. The board increased wages which were notoriously low to the extent of some $600,000,000. Already the reductions have reached the estimated total of $448,000,000, and announcement of other decreases are forecast for this week. The board has obviously found it impracticable to apply the cost of living standard which congress commended to its consideration in the transportation act.

The blame, however, need not be put upon the board, for in the same statute congress also called attention to the market rate of wages in comparable industries. In a word, labor is still treated as a commodity to be paid for at the market rate without serious regard for the necessities of the workers. The principle of the cost of living has been asserted, but not yet has it been applied. Railroad workers are still considered commodities rather than citizens. That is the meaning of the wage decision.

New York Day-By-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 31—Deauville's bathing beach has been transplanted to a Broadway setting. It opens the summer jazzing campaign in the most intimate of the jazz mosques. The wee dancing space is covered with sand and expert dancers say there is nothing like it.

It has become the fashion of supper clubs now to change their scenery monthly. This gives them a chance to have a "first night" and bring out with a loud bellow all those whose desire for new thrills have been suppressed.

At 2 o'clock the girls arrive. In bathing suits they slide down a slick runway, revealing bare limbs splotched with grotesque faces. One of the village artists, a society woman who now keeps an open cellar in the square, paints the limbs and no doubt Vanity Fair will speak highly of her neat issue. So novel, you know.

A canvas ceiling painted deep blue twinkles with electric stars and guests sit in hooded beach chairs guzzling hip oil. O yes, the bathing girls roll beach dice and play medicine ball to the tune of a white flanneled orchestra.

There is little ventilation and the air would gas a buzzard but it is something new and the same old crowd is there. The producer, for instance, who elevated a freckled face girl from the five and ten into stardom. She is roped in pearls and agleam with diamonds. No ball of fire is complete without them.

Too, the college boys with coat pockets revealing the necks of gin bottles and select boarding school girls who have bribed the matron. At 3 o'clock Ethel Barrymore is paraphrased by a weaving lassie atop a table who exclaims throatily: "I'm all the hell there is, there isn't any more!" and then the fun began.

Sam Blyth and Hugh Wiley, the short story stars, arrived in town from California the other day. Wiley, who delineates the negro character, spent his first afternoon watching the newsboys' crap games in Times Square. Blythe watched the traffic on Fifth Avenue from his hotel room. The next day they were both ready to return to the west.

Down in the old Chelsea district is a breath of ancient Spain. For three blocks all the restaurants serve Spanish cooking. Daughters of the proprietors usually serve the food. They wear rings in their ears and the style of Broadway is not reflected in their costumes. When dinner is over they will dance or play the guitar. There is a grand manner about receiving patrons and one feels instantly at home. Guava paste, bitter black coffee, bright yellow rice, the pungence of peppers and saffron and frijoles colorados—these are the gastronemic marks of distinction. The children are excellantly trained. They may come to the door, stand gravely for a moment looking at the diners but they soon disappear. The cafes are sought by sailors on shore leave.

WALT MASON

THE OLD DOCS

Oft when ailing I recall doctors of the days gone by, who from death would take a fall when I seemed inclined to die. There was good old Dr. Storm, who would some up in his gig, when the colic racked my form, and my agony was big. When he'd filled me up with dope, he would say, "I do my best; with his sickness I can cope if he's given perfect rest. Do not let him walk a step, let his sleep be long and sweet, and I'll stake my well known rep that he'll soon be on his feet." There was sense in being ill in those bright days gone so long, when the sawbones said, "Be still! Rest till you are well and strong!" Now the doctor comes to me, looking learned and grim and wise, and he says aloud, says he, "What you need is, exercise! Indolence will cook the goose of the huskiest of men! You are moldy from disuse—walk eight miles, or, better, ten! I could give you piebald pills, I could give you potions pink, but you'd better climb the hills on your rusty legs, I think. Go and saw a cord of wood, go and bale a ton of hay, and you'll soon be feeling good, and you'll bless me every day." What's the use of being sick when I get this from the doc: "Go and buy yourself a pick and get down and quarry rock!"

CLOTURE IS DOOMED, SENATE FACES LONG DEBATE ON TARIFF

WASHINGTON, May 31—Split on the proposal to apply cloture, or restricted debate, to the McCumber tariff bill, Republican senators had another caucus today in a further effort to smooth out their differences.

A number of their colleagues, unalterably opposed to cloture, or certain of the failure of any attempt to invoke it, deliberately remained away from the caucus which some of them predicted would end in a row, as did that held Thursday.

Senator Kellogg, of Minnesota, author of the cloture proposal, expressed himself however, as determined to see it thru, and he was understood to have been assured of the support of Senators Lenroot, of Wisconsin, Townsend of Michigan, and others who have apparently defied the Republican leaders opposed to it.

The charge was made by several Republican senators that Kellogg was being encouraged to press his proposal by a number on the Republican side who are known to favor the abandonment of the tariff measure and who are reported to enter in the hope that the question of cloture becomes the storm-center of interminable debate and the tariff bill will be delayed indefinitely and its passage prevented, perhaps, at this session. On the Democratic side, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, and other leaders, declared the tariff bill would not be passed if Kellogg carried his proposal from the Republican caucus to the senate floor and attempted to have it adopted by a majority vote.

Kellogg said he intended to press his proposal to a vote in the caucus and if it received the support of a majority of those present he would seek adoption in the senate.

The prediction was general on the Republican and Democratic side that the movement of cloture would fail, and the debate on the tariff would drag along until the senators grew weary of discussing its multitudinous details.

S. P. Buys Twenty New Locomotives

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 31 — Ponderous snortings and chuggings in the vicinity of the Baldwin Locomotive works plants at Eddystone, near Chester Monday, announced the departure for Texas of twenty Sante Fe type locomotives, in a solid train weighing over five thousand tons—the "prosperity special," as some of the employes have named it.

Speeches from a specially constructed grandstand alongside the Pennsylvania railroad tracks preceded the departure of the special.

These locomotives are destined to become part of the equipment of the Southern Pacific railroad. All the engines are oil burners.

THE MAPLE TREE HELPS MRS. ANT.

Oh, deary me! Oh, deary me!" sighed Mrs Ant, as she settled on the ground weary of flying in search of a nice building spot. "How I wish I were as tall as the maple tree. Then I could gaze all over the meadowland and choose the very spot I'd like to live in. As it is I fly from one place to another and can never make up my mind just where I'd like to build."

"Goodness gracious!" laughed a merry voice, and Mistress Maple bent down so Mrs Ant could see her and hear her speak. "What a wonderful world this would be if we could all have the things we want."

"I don't believe I'd ever complain, if I were you," laughed Mrs Ant. "You're so grand and tall. My, I'd be happy if I were as tall as you are."

"You mean you'd look as you would," replied Mrs Maple. "But then, I guess Mother Nature would have a hard time of it if she tried to please everybody. I don't suppose you'd believe me if I told you that at one time I was much smaller than you are?"

"Smaller than me!" exclaimed Mrs Ant. "You were smaller than I am? Surely you don't expect me to believe that, do you?"

"Believe it or not," laughed Mrs. Maple, "I certainly was as tiny as you are this very minute. And I don't suppose you would think that at one time I possessed a pair of wings, would you?"

"Oh, dear!" laughed Mrs. Ant. "It's really very kind of you to try to smooth my ruffled feelings, but really and truly I'd never believe that. No, I've not been on this earth very long, but I'm sure that if maple trees ever boasted of wings, my mother would have told me before I left home. Who ever heard of the like? My, but this is funny—a maple tree with wings!" and Mrs. Ant laughed so hard she forgot what she was doing, caught her gauzy wing on a blade of grass and tore it off.

"Smaller Than Me!"

She grew terribly excited and tried to fasten it on again, but the loosened wing wouldn't stay where she put it. "My goodness!" she cried. "What shall I do? I can't fly with only one wing. What shall I do?"

"There, there, little friend," sighed the Maple Tree kindly. "Don't feel too bad about it. That was just how I happened to build here. I came up here one day, blown on a rough old breeze. I fell on this very knoll on which you see me standing now, and just like you, one of my wings fell off. I tried to put it on and the other one dropped off and I thought I'd die. Then a bluebird hopped down, heard me complaining and gave me my first lesson in patience. Of course, I never dreamed I had the making of so wonderful a tree in me, or I should never have complained the way I did. You see I was then nothing more than a tiny brown seed with two little wings that had helped me fly to this spot."

"Yes, yes, go on," cried Mrs. Ant. "And did you finally become reconciled to the location? To me it seems too sigh above the meadow."

"When I finished talking with Bluebird and found out I couldn't replace the wings that had fallen off," laughed Mrs. Maple, "I turned over on the ground and waited my time. It soon came and the warm rains beat me gently into the ground. After a long struggle I finally built me a house and from it I sent up a green shoot. From a green shoot I've built the tree you see before you now. All you have to do is to help everyone you can and before you know it you'll probably grow larger."

Of course, Mrs. Ant didn't grow very much larger in body, but she certainly did grow very much larger in ideas, and before the season was over she saw why the knoll was the choice spot, for the meadows were flooded several times and her house always remained nice and dry and by the time Mrs. Maple sent out her winged children, Mrs. Ant had a large family and a happier family couldn't be found the country around.

HERRICK, DAREDEVIL OF CONGRESS, CALLS HAND OF AVIATOR

Accepts Challenge Of Flyer Who Threatens To Make Him Lose Necktie

WASHINGTON, May 31—Declaring he is not afraid to die, Manuel Herrick, the Oklahoma congressman who describes himself as an "aerial dare devil" and who recently startled his colleagues by a flight above the capitol, has accepted the challenge of a professional aviator to take part in a series of flying stunts if a plane can be borrowed from the war department.

Herrick, unwittingly or otherwise, alluded to aerial activities of Herbert J. Fahey, a Washington aviator, as flying of the "milk and water type." The implied criticism of his courage brot an immediate challenge from Fahey to show Herrick "everything in the book" by going the limit in a regular stunt airplane. "It has been reported to me," Fahey wrote the congressman, "that at the board of trade 'shad bake' last Sunday you criticized my aerial activities as 'milk and water flying'. In order to show you that I am not the 'milk and water type' and also to decide whether you are the dare-devil you claim to be, I hereby challenge you to secure the permission of the war department of the loan of an airplane and I will take you up in a 'regular' airplane. In the event that you accept this challenge I promise to make you lose more than your necktie."

Herrick declared today he was not frightened, that he was not afraid of losing his necktie or anything else and that he welcomes the chance to get some real thrills. He accepted the challenge in a letter which combined prose and poetry. It is as follows:

"Your letter of this date in which you challenge me to secure the permission of the war department for the use of an army airplane so you can take me up in a regular army stunt is received and the challenge accepted. Please call at my office and we will both go to the war department together and you, as a flyer will make the request of the war department for a plane and I will back up this request as a congressman. Personally I shall not make any more requests of the war depatment for any planes because I am sore at the war department for issuing an order that I must not do any more stunt flying over the capitol for fear that I might fall upon a skylight and fracture a pane or two and thus put some slivers of glass in some sleepy senator's or congressman's nose.

"But if you really have the sand in your craw to make good the challenge why you just mosey right along and we will go to the war department together, and my backing, upon your request for the plane will get you the plane. And as for your threat to make me lose more than my necktie, I will inform you that I haven't lost my necktie. This was an effort of the yellow papers to try to make me appear ridiculous. I will further inform you that you cannot make me lose anything, not even my temper."

DYNAMITERS THROW SCARE INTO STATE POLICE OF PENNA.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 31—Ranks of the state police and deputy sheriffs are being greatly augmented in this county following a reign of terror which has prevailed in the southern end of Fayette-co for the last ten days and which has been brot about by the numerous recent dynamitings of houses and property of miners who refused to join the strikers.

Officials believe a band of organized dynamiters has its base in the mountains south of here and that under cover of darkness members of this band make their forays against the miners' homes. Forty state police from Troop A, operating in this district are being replaced by the entire Troop E, 75 men being brot here. It is estimated that there are now on duty in Fayette-co, 2,300 deputies and state police.

The dynamiting outrages are believed the sequel of the plundering of the magazine of the Deyermann coal company, of which County Commission George W. Hibbs is owner. The mine magazine was looted of between six thousand and seven thousand sticks of dynamite. Explosions have followed a flood of threatening letters to non-union miners and operators.

The garage and an automobile at the home of Dennis Arton, in Fairchance, was blown up last night. The home of Roscoe Hilaman, on the outskirts of Fairchance, was partly wrecked by dynamite earlier in the evening.

PETITIONS FOR ALL STATE OFFICERS TO BE IN BY JUNE 9TH

COLUMBUS, May 31—After midnight on Friday, June 9 no more nominating petitions can be filed with the secretary of state for offices on the state ticket. But few of the announced candidates have yet filed and it is indicated that several of those who have been given publicity through their friends and the press of Ohio may not qualify at the last moment. Nominating petitions must be filed 60 days before the primaries, and when this date passes the real contest for the nomination will begin. Many Republicans and Democrats are watching events of the next ten days because there are indications of a few surprises in store for the voters before the bell sounds and candidates are barred. After the primaries are held the state conventions of both parties will be held, the platform adopted and the successful candidates permitted to address the delegates.

ADVERTISING MEN DISCUSS SELLING AND CUTTING COST

CLEVELAND, May 31—"The one lesson Henry Ford has taught American business is the value and necessity, from a profit standpoint, of building with a picture of the class of people you wish to serve, and then concentrating all energies to serving that class," Ed. A. Parsonage, general manager of the John Deere Wagon Works, told the convention of the Advertising Affiliation here.

"A tremendous move is being made today in all industries to arrive at new cost levels. We need this lesson at this time more than at any time in the history of the country—the necessity for reducing first costs. Reducing labor alone will not bring the answer. The wise manufacturer is analyzing his entire line and eliminating varieties that he finds have been in the past 'excess baggage.' My own experience has clearly demonstrated that the 'excess baggage' or excess varieties and styles today cost the American people enormous sums of money without correspondingly enriching the producer.

"Most any retail stock of goods today shows clearly the tremendous investment of capital with increasingly slow turn-overs, due to the mistaken idea that every little whim of the purchaser must be met in order to succeed as a merchant."

"Most American manufacturers continue to hit the high spots and seek fresh fields, when fine standing timber is right at their doors," declared Marquis Regan, president of Marquis Regan, Inc., of New York, and said that the remedy was in two things:

One: Intensive selling.

Two: Put marketing on an engineering basis.

PLAN BETTER ROADS TO BUCKEYE LAKE

COLUMBUS, May 29—The problem of making Buckeye Lake more accessible to motorists was discussed at a conference here by members of the Columbus and Newark Chambers of commerce, attended by lake residents and officials of the Ohio Good Roads federation. The conferees expressed themselves as desiring that the state highway department take over the few miles of the Newark-Lancaster road from Luray south to the Licking-Fairfield-co boundary. A committee was appointed to urge the Licking-co commissioners to conduct a hearing on this project.

It was pointed out that if these commissioners ask State Highway Director Herrick, to take over this section, he will have then legal authority to proceed. Necessary funds for an improvement work must be obtained by Director Herrick. A resolution was also passed advising that this work should be followed by improvement of the road from Hebron to the Lake. Licking-co would have to pay half the bill, according to the resolution.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN OHIO DECREASING, BUREAU REPORTS

COLUMBUS, May 31—That the unemployment situation in Ohio is improving is indicated by latest reports received by officials of the state department of labor and managers of the eight state employment bureaus in this state.

These reports show that applications for positions were made by 7,656 workers during the week ending May 20 and that 3,228 of these applicants obtained work. At the Akron bureau 1,076 applied for work and 396 obtained positions. At Cincinnati work was found for 338 of the 607. At Cleveland there were 2,105 registrations and 724 were placed; at Dayton 1,196 registrations and 531 placed; Hamilton 186 registrations and 68 placed; Toledo 1,157 registrations and 504 placed; Youngstown 318 registrations and 175 placed; Columbus 881 registered and 492 were placed.

GERMANS' ACCEPTANCE OF DEMANDS HELD AN EFFORT TO GET LOAN

PARIS, May 31—The German reply to the latest demands of the inter-allied reparations committee which is understood to be a virtual acceptance of all of them, was handed to the commission. It had been brot from Berlin by special courier.

The reported acceptance of Germany was expected in view of her urgent desire to get a great international loan from the bankers now in conference here. In commenting upon the general belief that Germany would meet the allies' demands to get a loan the Rhode Paris said:

"The slogan 'Germany will pay' now becomes a slogan 'America will loan.'" The German document will be taken under scrutiny immediately by the members of the reparations commission.

MERGER OF ARMY AND NAVY DEPTS. FACING DEFEAT

WASHINGTON, May 31—The administration's re-organization plan of consolidating the war and navy departments under one head will meet with strenuous opposition in congress, it was learned today.

As congress holds the final word in enactment of legislation necessary to perfect the merger, it was indicated the plan would be delayed until such time as administration influence might jam the legislation thru the house, but its rejection by the senate seems assured.

Borah Says Prosperity Of American Business Hinges Upon Europe

Borah, Republican of Idaho, declared today.

Harding Washes Hands Of Treasury Scrap

WASHINGTON, May 31—President Harding has decided, temporarily, at least, to keep hands off in the treasury patronage row. It was learned authoritatively today that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has virtually a carte blanche authority to go ahead with his re-organization plans. In effect, the president has waived aside the protests against the action of Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair in deposing some of the appointees of Assistant Secretary Elmer Dover, who was appointed at the behest of the same congressmen going "to clean house" in the treasury.

Boston University To Have Athletic Field

BOSTON, Mass. May 31 — Boston University, according to the latest reports of the athletic council, will have an athletic field at last. The trustees of the university have given a grant of $2,500 to put a field on the Bay State road property into good condition. The lack of an athletic field has been long felt among the students, who claim that the need of one prevented Boston University from being "on the map" in the intercollegiate world.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Revelations of a Wife

The Way Madge "Overplayed" with Mother Graham.

NOT even Lillian's "alibi" served me with Mother Graham when that august lady learned within an hour of dinner-time that Allen Drake and my father would be with us for the meal, and that the brilliant agent of the secret diplomatic service would be our guest for an indefinite period.

"You needn't try to tell me, Margaret, that you didn't know until just now that they were coming," she said, her face reddening with resentment. "I suppose you think it was a smart trick to play me to keep me in ignorance that your father is coming home and is bringing Mr. Drake. Though the land knows I don't like him much, yet Allen Drake has been in every capital in Europe and this continent, too, and has seen everything and everybody, and is as fastidious as a cat—I'll wager Katie has cotton sheets on that guest room bed!"

"No, she hasn't, for the bed isn't made. It simply has a cover spread over the mattress," I said. "I told her yesterday when she cleaned, not to keep that bed made up."

"It's a wonder you had that much sense," she retorted grudgingly. "Now you get out those linen sheets and pillow-slips and the best pair of blankets and that silk coverlet, and send Marion to me. She's splendid help making a bed, that little thing, and then do you get some flowers picked and up there, and a pitcher of fresh water and a glass, and a book and some magazines, and matches, and—all the rest," she finished vaguely.

"I'll attend to everything," I said meekly, glad to get off so cheaply, and making for the staircase on my way to the linen closet. "By the way, what do you think I'd better wear for dinner?"

"Of All Things!"

She snorted violently, and I knew that I had overdone the patient Grisda pose. With a vivid memory of the time she had accused me of dressing for Tom Chester's approval, I had thought to disarm her by my request, but instead I found that I only had provided her with a whip for my flagellation.

"Of all things!" she began. "Well, I'm going to sit right down now and wait for the world to come to an end, to HEAR YOU asking ME what you'll wear for dinner when there's a good-looking man as a guest. It would be a pile of use my telling you, wouldn't it? Judging by that performance the night that young whipper-snapper of a Tom Chester was here, you'll dress up in your best bib and tucker. Don't ask me, for I haven't any advice to give you. If you don't know what's proper and fitting, at your age, nothing I could say would teach you anything."

With an effort that brought every nerve into play, I grimly put down the impulse to answer her outrageous tirade. Instead, I walked calmly to the linen closet, took out the articles for which she had asked, carried them into the guest room and laid them upon the bed. Then still silent, I left the room, and sought the flower garden, where I gathered a big cluster of scarlet and orange nasturtiums, relieved their vivid color with a few blossoms of white cosmos, and a spray or two of feathery vine and arranged them in a bowl of brown pottery. Then I stepped back and admired my own handiwork with the lessening of tense nerves which flowers and their arrangement always bring to me.

Dr. Pettit's Report.

"That's perfectly breath-taking, Madge!" Lillian's admiring voice sounded behind me. "Where are you going to put it?"

"In Dad's room," I returned, wondering a second later why I had answered as I had. I certainly had intended the flowers for the guest room assigned to Allen Drake, but at Lillian's question there had suddenly flashed over me an inexplicable revulsion against my putting them there.

"Have you time to do something for me?" I asked.

"Loads," she answered promptly.

"Then I wish you'd fix something in the flower line for the room of His Lordship, Mr. Drake," I said. "Mother Graham's on the war path up there, putting the best linen and everything else on display, and she's depending on me to do the fancy things. But if I look up the other articles she wants, I shan't have time for the flowers, or to dress."

"Of course, I'll do anything you like," she said, "but I'm no such dabster at flowers as you are, my dear. However, I imagine he'll not linger long over posies when he knows what's up. I didn't tell you about Herbie's report."

"No," I returned, laconically. In truth, I had been slightly piqued that after Dr. Pettit's return from attending the man Smith at the Briggs home, she had said no word to me of the result of the physician's call.

"It wasn't much," she said, "except that the gifted Mr. Smith will have to spend nearly a week with his foot upon a chair, which just suits my plans perfectly.

YOUR HEALTH

Why Being Over-Tired Predisposes You to Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

YESTERDAY I read that fatigue does not increase susceptibility to illness. Experiments on rats made at one of the great universities were said to show that, if anything, fatigue increases resistance to disease.

One swallow does not make a summer. It will take a lot more testimony to convince me that overfatigue is not dangerous to human beings. I am not "up" on rats, except to know they are shrewder and smarter in some ways than men. They dodge traps and manage to survive when even an American Indian would be caught. I am prepared to believe that they can resist fatigue as a man cannot.

I doubt if honest tiredness ever hurt any one. Work is needed by every one. You will not thrive unless you use your muscles—all of them—and use them enough to provoke perspiration.

Any sort of muscular effort made in spurts may do more harm than good. Spasmodic, struggling, exhausting efforts may injure the heart and result in real damage.

On the other hand, regular, systematic, sustained exercise to the point of fatigue will do you good.

The other day I saw a woman close to 70 years of age who has rejuvenated herself and is keeping this second "youngness" by daily exercises to the music of a phonograph. She can skip and dance and float through the air as gracefully as any professional dancer you ever saw.

This woman had curvature of the spine in her youth. Instead of wearing a plaster cast or some steel-banded supporting device, she chose to find movements and exercises to develop the withered muscles and to strengthen her twisted back and shoulder. She has succeeded so well that little evidence remains of her early deformity.

Each of us should find some physical activity to keep fit. The laborer needs no addition to his daily toil, but everybody should exercise enough each day to be really and truly tired at bed time.

To be tired is one thing, and to be over-fatigued is another. Whether the over-fatigue is the result of long-continued and exhausting manual labor, or whether it comes from mental effort, there can be no doubt that the lowered vitality leaves the body less able to resist the invasion of disease.

Science has made many tests to prove the effects of injury upon the body. For instance, if a given part of the body of a rabbit is crushed and then the rabbit is injected with the germs of tuberculosis, the injured organ will be the part first involved by the germ action.

It is a far-fetched argument I admit, but it stands to reason that those units of society damaged by over-fatigue or otherwise, will be the first to suffer when epidemics sweep the earth.

But whether our disease resistance is or is not lowered by over-fatigue, we do know that our efficiency is impaired by it. Quantity-production in any factory is increased by having regular intervals of rest and refreshment.

The records of every industrial plant show that the very great majority of accidents happen late in the day when fatigue has lessened alertness and physical prowess.

We will watch the experiments on fatigue with interest, of course, but at present we stick to our guns and insist that over fatigue is an important factor among the predisposing causes of disease.

Answers to Health Questions

W. M. H. J.—Q—I am a young girl, 17 years old, and I am troubled with nosebleeds. They generally last about an hour and a half. Will you please tell me what to do to overcome this condition.

A—I would advise you to consult a nose specialist and follow his advice about treatment. Undoubtedly you will be cured by some simple local treatment. But a careful examination is necessary to determine the cause and the remedy.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Out-of-Joint Jane

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

JANE'S gone to work.

Poor Jane, what a time she is having, being sorry for herself!

Poor? Not at all!

Neglected? Not in the least!

Ill? No, just discontented and restless, and selfish and self-absorbed, and—yes, I'm afraid I'll have to call her heartless.

She has a good husband and a pretty little home, and two darling children and an indulgent mother, who made her clothes and the children's clothes, and darned Husband's socks and took care of the baby and did the marketing and paid the bills, and now—Mother's dead and Jane simply will not be bothered with drudgery a day longer.

"The Broader Life"

She hates housework and she hates cooking and she hates marketing, and as for taking care of children—not she!

Aren't there plenty of nurse girls to do that—or orphan asylums—or boarding schools—or at a pinch some old-fashioned relative who doesn't know any better?

So Jane has given up her little home and sent her children away and she's got a job and she's having the time of her life posing downtown as a misunderstood, unappreciated woman, with some mysterious tragedy in the background of her life. There's a tragedy in the foreground all right. Jane had a pull and when she got her job, she took it away from a girl who had no home and no husband and no one to look after her at all.

And Jane is buying new dresses and smart sport coats and sport hats and the nearest she ever comes to a golf links is when somebody takes her for a spin on a Saturday afternoon and she leans forward in the car and watches somebody on the other side of a fence making a drive.

She won't stay at this particular job very long, there's too much hard work about it, and Jane doesn't like work.

As a matter of fact, she hates work.

What Jane wants is "the broader life," and by that she means books and pictures, and music and the theatre and cultivation—to hear her tell it.

What she really wants is excitement and admiration, and idleness and gratified vanity.

Do you know what's the matter with Jane?

She read a queer, distorted, out-of-joint book not long ago, a book telling about a little town and the dull life in it and the brilliant girl who went there to live and how she suffered and what she did to try to lift her life out of the commonplace.

Didn't She Spoil Her?

Poor Jane! She only read the surface of the book. She didn't see that the heroine was just a shallow, conceited, selfish creature, who couldn't understand one single fine trait of the husband she thought was so much beneath her.

No, I'm not sorry for Jane, I'm sorry for Jane's husband.

Jane's children—well, I'm not particularly sorry for them—not now.

They say the aunt who has taken them to look after them is a real human being. She loves children and she loves her home, and she knows fairy stories and how to tell them, and she can make perfectly wonderful cookies and what she doesn't know about tying up a little girl's hair with a perfectly beautiful bow isn't worth knowing. Yes, I think the children are a good deal better off—away from Jane.

Jane's mother, I wonder if she is at all to blame—for Jane.

Didn't she spoil her a good deal and indulge her and wait upon her?

Poor soul, what a good thing it is for her that she isn't here to see poor Jane making such a goose of herself!

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 18, and I am engaged to a young man two years my senior. I love this young man, but he doubts it. What can I do to make him feel that I really do love him?

He says he loves me, but he tells me he is going to see other girls. I know that he doesn't, because he calls to see me the nights he is supposed to go to see other girls.

Do you think I am too young to marry if my parents consent?

H. M. S.

H. M. S.: Be loyal and true, and the young man will see that you love him. Your parents are the ones to decide whether you are too young to marry, my dear. However, 18 is rather young to take up life's responsibilities.

"Yes," I agreed. "I go home, slip into comfortable dress and some easy slippers, have dinner, and feel as if I couldn't move. I'm so comfortable. Then the clock registers time to be stirring if I'm to be anywhere near on time, and away I fly to begin the scramble all over again."

"By the way, have you decided to submit a sketch for the prize they're offering for the best street costume?" Veronica asked.

"I have something in mind," I admitted. "As yet it's only a child of my brain, as I haven't done anything to perpetuate it in black and white."

"Then do proceed," Veronica urged. "I've thought of nothing, and perhaps your diligence will give me inspiration."

I reached for a bit of cardboard that was lying near, then paused with my

This Smart Frock Gains Length of Line by the Clever Use of Panels.

"Yes," replied Veronica. "They said simple and in very good taste. I think they want to get our conception of what that means."

"Well, this is simple enough, and it's also in extremely good taste for street wear," I said, sketching in the long lines of the dress as I spoke.

"Navy blue?" questioned Veronica.

"Yes, very fine serge," I answered. "Somehow I can't seem to invent any other color so practical and so likely to be becoming."

"There isn't any, as far as I can see," Veronica reassured.

"Well, there are the lovely beiges this season, and black is still smart, but blue seems to be becoming to people who can wear neither of those," I summed up.

"What are you using with your blue?" asked Veronica.

"Bulgarian embroidery in very rich reds," I answered. "It appears in band trimming on panels, belt and sleeves."

"That's very smart, the way you are letting the panels drop from the blouse itself," Veronica observed.

"I think it gives added length of line," I answered. "And as the season continues to sponsor panels, new ways of introducing them give variety."

"Then, the dress is really a two-piece affair?" she asked.

"Yes," I replied. "But it is easily adjusted and made with no double layers, so that it will be as cool as possible. The plain little skirt is topped by the red embroidery, and the blouse slips on over this."

I had finished the sketch by this time, and she remarked that it was very practical and "quite snappy." "But how about the hat?" she asked.

"Oh, it's pagoda-shaped," I answered. "I thought that suited the type of the dress, and I'm making the hat red with silver threads."

I drew fringed tabs on the low-heeled walking shoes. "Rich brown leather for walking," I remarked.

"And give her some finely-ribbed, wool-and-silk mixture stockings to go with them," directed Veronica.

"By the way, don't you like the new amber-colored stockings?" I asked. "I've just bought some to go with my new black suede slippers."

"I do, indeed," she agreed, "and that

WEDNESDAY, MAY 31.

This should prove to be a very active and progressive day, according to the reading of the planets' daily motions. With the Sun trine Jupiter by mutual aspect, and with both Sol and Jupiter under splendid Lunar transit, there seems nothing to prevent a brilliant and vigorous march forward to the goal of the ambitions. All manner of success, prosperity and growth are to be forecast from this sidereal rule. There should be increase of business as well as fortune, and also promotion or recognition for those who undeniably deserve it.

Those whose birthday it is have the forecast of a year of splendid progress with advancement and increase of fortune, as well as pleasure and prosperity in all of life's contacts. A child born on this day should be ambitious, clever, generous, and should rise

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Are You Planning to Celebrate a June Wedding Anniversary?

JUNE is not only a month celebrated for its roses and strawberries, sweet girl graduates and brides, but for its wedding anniversary days.

The wooden wedding, which celebrates the fifth anniversary, affords an opportunity for a merry-making that is quite worth-while. In preparing for this celebration, decorate the house with ferns, smilax, yellow flowers and shaving curls. If a sawmill is not found on a motoring trip search, a local carpenter may be induced to furnish the shaving curls.

Cover the dining table with leaf-green linen, place in the centre a small brass-bound wooden dish-tub, fill it with shaving curls, and out of the centre let five full pink rosebuds rise as a symbol of five perfect years. Lay a pink rose at each plate with the place cards tied to the stems. Put tiny olive-wood baskets filled with marzepan strawberries at each plate. Use wooden service-plates, roll-baskets and tan paper serving-cases for the food.

The souvenirs may be painted wooden spoons, tiny wooden utensils, baskets for different uses or fancy boxes of wood. There are many novelties in wood for both souvenirs and gifts to be found in the shops.

Above the table a straw umbrella may edge. The dinner should be suitable for the season, containing but few hot dishes. A strawberry canape a chilled strawberry soup, broiled fish, broiled chicken or birds, a fruit salad and a chilled dessert with iced tea will make a satisfactory menu.

A happy musical idea is to have a gramaphone in a closet or the next room, where the sound is distant enough to be heard, yet not loud enough to hinder conversation, but where the records may be changed and the machine wound up. An at-home movie is a popular way to entertain guests after dinner. The outfits may be rented with the films.

A tin wedding to celebrate the tenth anniversary may be a jolly affair, and may be celebrated as a barn or garage dance. The decorations should be of greenery and fresh vegetables, Chinese lanterns or lanterns made of tin strainers and sieves. A tin milk-pail should hold the fruit punch, and small tin dippers or cups may be used for drinking. Little tin wedding slippers may be used for souvenirs for the ladies, and tin pipes for the men. Tin gifts of all sorts are to be found in the shops, including all of the kitchen utensils. There are tin crowns, crosses and chains of large size, high hats, Spanish combs, rolling-pins, hearts with padlocks and keys, large wedding slippers with fancy rosettes,

The supper should be of the buffet sort, and tin serving-plates should be used with paper napkins and cups. Cover the serving-table with a white paper cloth. Install a gas, electric or alcohol stove with a hot plate large enough to keep all the hot food warm in little double boilers during the service. Cakes on large tin trays may be cut as needed. Sandwiches keep well in a large, square ice cream mould covered with a damp cloth.

First, hot or cold bouillon may be served, then creamed lobster or creamed chicken, with peas and rolls, little sandwiches and chicken salad. Iced tea punch, ice cream and cake, frozen strawberries or iced watermelon may be served as a final dainty.

The dance begins with a tin march. All the guests carry their gifts to the happy pair and lay them at their feet as they pass the receiving party. The march breaks into the first dance, a "spoon" trot, each one being favored with a tin teaspoon at the end by the bride and groom. The next dance should be a "Dan Tucker" to put everybody in the spirit of real out-of-door fun.

If the dancing should have to be done on a lawn, a canvas ground-cloth may be stretched and staked down, and will be pleasanter to dance on than the grass. Sometimes a cement tennis court

FAMOUS "WITS" OF HISTORY

Little Stories of Men and Women Whose Sayings Are Still Remembered

By MARK STUYVESANT

How E. A. Sothern Entertained a Nervous English Friend.

IT sometimes seems that wit and practical joking go together. The day when the practical joke was considered fun is long past, but some practical jokes that have been played are worthy of recounting chiefly because of those who indulged in them.

E. A. Sothern was a past master at this game, and some of his pranks, which are remarkable for detail, are humorously described by his son—E. H. Sothern—in his "Melancholy Tale of Me."

In England, in 1875, some people thought Indians camped in Central Park in New York, and cowboys on bucking broncos, rode up and down Fifth avenue.

Mr. Lee, the husband of Adelaide Neilson, the actress, was one of these.

He was coming to New York for a visit. Mr. Sothern was delighted. Immediately his nimble brain planned a dinner which was a triumph of imagination, fun and entertainment.

Mr. Lee landed, and Mr. Sothern escorted him to his hotel. He told him they were to go on a buffalo hunt the next day, accompanied by a tribe of Sioux Indians. He also told Mr. Lee that he was being entertained that night at dinner where many of the distinguished men of New York would welcome him. Mr. Sothern mentioned judges, generals, senators and men prominent in most of the walks of life.

During the course of the dinner one of the guests laughed at the man sitting opposite him. This gentleman took exception, and, jumping to his feet, sprang across the table, waving a vicious-looking knife in midair, and threatened to cut out the heart of the offender. With great difficulty the other men held him back. Sothern quieted Mr. Lee by telling him not to mind—that some of the men were rather touchy.

Lee's appetite was not good. He was very hungry.

Things calmed down, and the dinner went on.

The speeches started. They were all very complimentary to Mr. Lee, and were received with much noise and hilarity but with an evident undercurrent of discontent.

Mr. Lee arose to respond. He was noticeably nervous. In his efforts to calm the diners and put the guests on a footing of good-fellowship, he thought he would tell of his mixed ancestry.

He said:

"I was born in England, my mother was Irish and my father was Scotch. As an Englishman, I salute you! As a

Lee's Appetite Was Not Good.

Scotchman I greet you! As an Irishman I cry 'Erin Go Bragh!'"

This was the moment they were waiting for.

"He means me!" cried a senator, and pulled a bowie knife. Then a minister aimed a gun and shot the senator dead. A terrific scramble ensued.

The signal for the lights to go out was given.

When the lights were turned on the floor was strewn with dead men. A search was made for the guest of honor, who was found well under the table, his teeth chattering, and his knees end.

Sothern pulled him out, sigh and men came to life, and thrice to have with much fun and ma planations.

COOPERDALE WINS A DOUBLE HEADER ON HOME DIAMOND

Before a crowd of 50 people, the Cooperdale baseball nine celebrated Decoration Day by taking a double header from the Fresno outfit on the Cooperdale diamond. The first game ended by the close score of 12 to 11. The second game, which went only seven innigs, ended 9 to 6.

The batteries for the first game were: Fresno—W. Syler and Quay Norman; Cooperdale—Guy and Dorsey. The Cooperdale pitcher and catcher were from Zanesville. They were colored.

The Fresno nine started off in fair shape in the first inning of the second game, but failed to connect in the six remaining innings, so the home team made it a perfect day. The batteries in the second game were Fresno, Haver and Q. Norman. Cooperdale, Hardesty, Hall and Brennon.

In the evening an old-fashioned dance was held in Evans' hall. A big crowd attended the dance. A three piece orchestra furnished the music for the occasion. Members of the Fresno baseball teams, their wives and friends stayed over and attended the dance after the game.

On Sunday the Bladensburg nine will cross bats with Cooperdale players on the Cooperdale diamond.

MURPHY WINS 500 MILE SWEEPSTAKES AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31. — Jimmy Murphy won yesterday's 500 mile race at the Indianapolis Speedway. That much was certain today. But that he did not win all the 200 laps appeared equally certain. Official announcements and equally official counter-announcements in the press Pagoda during the race variously had Murphy winning all the laps, Harry Hartz some of them and Peter De Paolo copping a few. It requires a small army of checkers to tally the speed-Duray one, according to the re-check. hard to make. What today appears to be a final re-checking gives Murphy all laps except those from the 74th to the 122nd. Hartz took all these except four. De Palo took three and Leon men's doubles.

The Cubs and Cardinals exchanged outfielders Max Flack and Clifton Heathcote and then the Cubs went out and won a double bill.

The Giants got 21 runs and 43 hits against the Phillies, yet merely managed to break even on the day.

The Indians did a lofty dive into fifth place by dropping a pair to the White Sox.

The Reds staked Rixey to an easy assignment by mauling three Pirate pitchers in the morning games.

With Cobb and Heilman set down by an edict because of ruffling an umpire's feelings, and Blue ill, the Tigers pulled out an even break on the day with the Browns.

The Senators moved into fourth place with a double victory over the Red Sox.

was as follows:

That Ward had been blackmailed, had paid $30,000 in hush money over a period of six weeks and then faced a demand for $75,000 which he could not pay. At the hour appointed for payment of the sum, Ward said he met Peters at a previously agreed spot in order to temporize with Peters whom he charges with pressing a revolver to his side and ordering him to drive to the reservoir.

Here, Ward declares, he was confronted with "Charley Ross" and "Jack" in another car, that a revolver battle followed, Peters sending a bullet thru Ward's car window before he dropped dead.

WHITE PLAINS, Ky., May 31—District Attorney F. E. Weeks, today announced his intention of investigating immediately and thoroughly the story published in the New York Evening Journal that Walter S. Ward shot Clarence Peters and a companion in the Ward home on the night of May 15.

"I don't know what to think of the story," he said. "There is a possibility that this version of the shooting may stand up under investigation. The whole thing will be run down immediately." Weeks, who was reached at his home expressed an intention to check the story immediately by ordering an inspection of the library of the Ward home for the fourth bullet which is supposed to have crashed into the woodwork after the first had killed Peters and two shots had wounded his companion. He left immediately for his office to consult other officials as to course of action to be taken.

SMITH OUTLINES HIS PLATFORM IN CAMPAIGN

COLUMBUS, May 31. That he is unalterably opposed to the violation of the initiative and referendum; that if elected governor of Ohio he will endeavor to retain, or appoint, in official positions capable and efficient men and women and that he will enforce the laws, are declarations made by Secretary of State Harvey C. Smits in a letter to State Senator James F. Burke, Elyria. Secretary Smith is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. His letter to Senator Burke is a reply to a questionnaire sent by Senator Burke to him. During the debate in the senate preceding passing of the Dunn emergency act, providing for re-organization of state departments, Senator Burke opposed passage of he emergency clause.

Endorsing civil service and social justice, Secretary Smith asserted that common sense will dictate, and that courts are not needed to state when emergencies serious enough to justify suspension of referendum rights exist. Secretary Smith expressed the conviction that the Republican state platform should contain planks affirming law enforcement, civil service and social justice.

RAIL STRIKE

as regards the wage reduction order by the United States railway labor board are being made today by the executive council of the brotherhood.

A resolution adopted by the council authorizing the strike ballot declares the proposed cut unwarranted and unfair and states that altho cost of living has not declined more than 3 per cent the board would reduce the wages 13.2 per cent. The wage cut as ordered by the railway board is to take effect July 1. Ballots will be sent to 175,000 members of the union and 70,000 non union employes. If the ballots show a majority of the men favor a strike, E. F. Grable, president of the union, said he had been empowered to call a walk out. July 5th has been set as the tentative date for the strike, he said. Grable expressed the belief that other rail road unions would call for a strike vote among their men in the near future.

FEUD FORTY YEARS OLD BREAKS OUT ANEW YESTERDAY

COVINGTON, Ky., May 31—The smoldering Norman-Adkin feud which was responsible for many of the sudden deaths in Boone co. a score of years ago, burst into blaze at Walton, Ky., Memorial Day and as a result Frank Norman, 53, is dying in St Elizabeth's Hospital, with three bullets in his body. Sheriff B. B. Hume, of Boone-co, said that he had arrested I. T. Adkin of Walton, and placed him in the Burlington, Ky., jail, on a charge of murder.

According to the sheriff, the prisoner maintained a sullen silence following his arrest Monday afternoon, while Norman, before lapsing into unconsciousness, also refused to divulge the manner in which he was wounded. W. H. Norman, brother of the dying man, who lives here, told the sheriff that he knew nothing of the shooting. He said according to advices he received from Walton, Frank Norman left home early Monday to go on a fishing trip.

The sheriff said he was unable to learn anything concerning the shooting. "If he's anything like the old Normans he will die without telling a word," the sheriff said regarding the wounded man. According to residents of Walton a violent feud raged between the Norman and Adkin families forty years ago, but after several members of each family were shot it had simmered down. The shooting is the first evidence of ill feeling between the families in the last twenty years, old Walton residents said.

LOVE OF MOTHER AND SON CAUSES JEALOUS MAN TO KILL BOTH

NEW YORK, May 31—Crazed by jealousy of the love of his wife and his son for each other, George Krumpet, 48, today beheaded his seven-year-old son, William, killed his wife by slashing her throat, then severed his own jugular vein and is dying in Bellevue hospital.

Crowds gathered before the apartment in East 45th-st, attracted by the cries and four detectives, who were passing in a car, rushed to investigate. Krumpet staggered out and collapsed at their feet. He was taken back to his apartment and propped in a chair, where he nodded assent to police asking as to whether had he killed his wife and child, with a bloodstained penknife which lay on a table.

On the boy's lips was a smile, indicating he did not know what happened when he was attacked while asleep. The mother apparently had been killed while defending her son. A relative told the story of serious quarrels over the boy.

MEMORIAL PARADE

commander of the American Legion, the legion ritual was performed at both cemeteries. Taps were blown by the legion buglers, William Varnes and Carl Hursey, and the customary salute was fired by a Legion squad.

Lloyd S. Leech, county prosecutor delivered the address at the Oak Ridge cemetery. Leech reviewed the history of this country from the days of the civil war.

"After the civil was over," Leech said, "the whole world was surprised at the transformation. Foreign statesmen and military experts had predicted that, with the disbanding of such large armies, riot, bloodshed and disorder would follow, but instead, the soldier veteran turned citizen and quietly went back to the farm, factory, office and shop. Being true Americans, they rebuilt cities, revived industries, opened new channels of commerce, and the fields that were stained with blood in April were green with crops in June."

Leech eulogized the Civil war veterans as the men who fought for the unity of this country; the Spanish-American war veterans as the men who extended the hand of freedom and brotherly love to a down trodden and oppressed people; and the World War veterans as the soldiers who fought to uphold the honor of this nation, and to redeem the crushed and bleeding nations of Europe.

"We must place nation ahead of self, and ever bear in mind that the safety of every man, his family, his home and his property lies in the supremacy of the law," Leech said in closing. "It is oftimes easy to be a hero in the hour when fleets and armies assail the nation, but the true test of pure citizenship comes when, in the deep and silent night the tempter comes and points to a way in which we may secure a selfish gain by being a traitor to our trust and yet not be discovered.

Following Leech's interesting address, the Memorial procession marched to South Lawn cemetery. There the Boy Scouts had charge of decorating the graves of the old veterans. The Legion ritual was again performed, and Joseph Shepler, a member of the Legion, gave an address.

"Flag Etiquette" might well have been the title of Shepler's address.

He bemoaned the lack of proper outward demonstration of patriotism by the average citizen, and shamed the men for failing to bare their heads as Old Glory passed by. No matter how much patriotism is contained in the heart, a man is not doing his duty until he makes outward declaration of his feelings, to properly impress the younger generation, Shepler said.

"If the younger generation is to have the same respect for the veterans of the World war, as the present generation has for veterans of the Civil and Spanish American war, it must be made to realize the sacredness of the ideals battled for in the World war, he declared.

The speaker proclaimed Memorial Day as a day set apart as a tribute to individual soldiers, vanquished as well as the victor.

"We honor the graves of the Revolutionary soldier because of the heritage he has given us. He left us the incubus from which this country grew. Similarly, we honor the veterans of the Civil War for the united country which they left to us. Honor for the soldiers of the World War must be instilled in the future generation by the teachings of present citizens.

"God always chooses a people to do his work. The mantle of leadership has fallen upon the American people. European nations are at present unfit for the work. America is a young, strong, lusty nation. If we are to do the work, tho, we must have a moral torch in the darkness of iniquity. We must teach the love of our country to our own citizens and we must breed a real spirit of patriotism if we are to be worthy of our trust."

In addition to the services of the Legion at South Lawn cemetery, the Boy Scout organization, and the Women's Relief Corps each held separate ceremonies, at the close of the Memorial address by Shepler.
